4. Health and safety

Health aspects: Thermal media donors are not hazardous to health. No personal protection is needed under recommended conditions of use.

Fire hazards: Although the film base is a combustible material, it is not easily flammable. Considerable heating above ambient conditions is required before ignition and combustion can occur. Products of combustion will depend on the burning conditions and are likely to include oxides of carbon, nitrogen and sulphur. In the event of a fire, fire-fighters should wear self-contained breathing apparatus and protective clothing.

Extinguishing media: Use water spray, carbon dioxide (CO₂) or dry powder extinguishers.

5. Waste disposal

Waste polyethylene terephthalate films are listed under the European Waste Catalogue (EWC) as 09 01 08 "photographic film and paper free of silver or silver compounds". They are not classified as hazardous and may be recycled along with other plastics where facilities exist. If recycling is not an option these films can be incinerated with or without energy recovery. If recovery is not possible they can be disposed of by landfill.

6. Transport and labelling regulations

Not regulated for any mode of transportation.

7. Storage

Keep in a dry cool place
